PREFACE.

The first edition of the Alumni Record of Wesleyan University was published in 1869. It was compiled by Orange Judd, of the class of 1847, and was published at his expense. To quote from the Preface to the edition of 1873, it was "not the least of Mr. Judd's noble gifts to the University, in whose welfare he has always taken such a generous interest." This book was said to be more complete than any similar work previously issued by an American college.

The second edition of the Record appeared in 1873. It was published by the Alumni Association, and was edited by a committee, appointed by the Association, consisting of Professors C. T. Winchester and William North Rice, and Mr. G. Brown Goode.

The third edition was published by the University in 1883, under the direction of a committee of the Faculty, consisting originally of President Foss, and Professors Rice and Winchester; upon the resignation of President Foss, President Beach was appointed in his place, and during the absence for a year of Professor Winchester, Professor C. S. Harrington was added to the committee. Under the direction of this Committee of Supervision, the editing of the Record of Graduate Alumni was performed by Mr. Joseph C. Burke, of the class of 1874; Mr. G. Brown Goode prepared the Bibliographical Record, and Mr. C. S. Smiley, of the class of 1874, the Record of Non-Graduate Alumni. The Trustees authorized the edition in June, 1879, but the labor of obtaining information, now published for the first time, concerning the non-graduates, rendered it impracticable to issue the book until 1883. This edition of the Record, comprising 836 pages, was also understood to be the most complete Alumni Record issued to date by any of the colleges of America.

The Trustees voted in June, 1909, to publish a fourth edition of the Record, and appointed Professors Rice and Winchester to assist the Editor as an Advisory Committee. The aim has been to make this edition as complete as its predecessors in most particulars. Some consideration had to be given, however, to the question of bulk, as the number of graduates and non-graduates has more than doubled since 1883. The family records of the non-graduates and of the members of the Faculty, not graduates of Wesleyan, have therefore been omitted, and instead of printing a complete Bibliographical Record, the titles of books published, or of the most important of them in case the list was long, have been inserted in the personal record. In some particulars this edition is more complete than the earlier ones, as, for instance, in including the fraternity relationship of graduates and non-graduates. It is a matter of regret that considerations of space have compelled the adoption of a somewhat condensed form of statement; the book would have been more attractive in appearance if the names, degrees, etc., could have been displayed in better typographical form.

To quote again from the preface to an earlier edition, "in a work of this kind it is necessary to aim at entire accuracy, but folly to expect to attain it." The Editor is fully conscious that there are many errors in these pages. In partial extenuation he would plead that from a number of the graduates, and from a much larger number of the non-graduates, he has been unable to obtain the information needed in order to prepare a full and accurate record. In cases where the blank form asking for information was not returned, a second and, later, a third communication was sent, but a number made no reply, and a few definitely refused to accede to the request. The Editor has done what he could to supply these deficiencies from other sources, but there is always doubt as to the accuracy of information thus obtained. One of the most difficult tasks has been to trace the families of the alumni who have died since 1883, so as to bring the record of marriages and deaths of children up to date. From one source or another, however, the information has in most cases been secured. It is to be hoped that so long a period as twenty-eight years will not be allowed to elapse again before the publication of the next Alumni Record.

The following explanatory remarks may be offered concerning certain features of the book:

Abbreviations. Only those in common use have been employed, as, for instance, b. for born, m. for married, d. for died. An asterisk before a name indicates decease.

Degrees. All degrees are from Wesleyan University, unless otherwise stated, except that in a few cases, for lack of information, M.D. is printed without indication of the college from which it was received.

Bibliography. On account of lack of space it has been impossible to include mention of articles and ephemeral publications; the titles of books only are given, and in many cases merely a selection of titles from a long list.

Fraternities. Mention of fraternities is restricted to those in active existence at the present time, including the Commons Club. These are, in the order of their establishment: Phi Nu Theta, or Eclectic, Psi Upsilon, Chi Psi, Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, and the Commons Club.

Non-graduates. The list does not include all who have studied at Wesleyan University, but only those who have been in residence long enough to undergo at least one examination.

The Editor would acknowledge his obligation to the many persons, graduates of the college and others, who have replied so courteously to his requests for information; to the printers, The Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor Company, for their painstaking work; to Professors Rice and Winchester, for their criticism and advice; and to the Trustees, for giving him an opportunity of presenting to the college, which he has been permitted to serve for the last twenty years, this humble tribute of loyalty and affection.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY.

(BY PROFESSOR C. T. WINCHESTER, L.H.D.)

It was not until about the close of the first quarter of the last century that the Methodist Episcopal Church began to give any very earnest and hearty patronage to the cause of higher education. Between the years 1824 and 1826, the flourishing seminaries at Wilbraham, Kents Hill, and Cazenovia were opened under the auspices of the denomination, and immediately secured a large attendance. While the seminaries served to foster and encourage the newly-awakened interest in education, the leading minds of the Church became convinced of the need of some institution of collegiate rank, located in New England or New York, which should provide facilities for the highest intellectual culture.

At this juncture, a seeming accident turned their attention to Middletown, Conn., and secured the immediate establishment of the projected institution at this place. In 1825, Capt. Alden Partridge, first Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, opened in Middletown the "American Literary, Scientific, and Military Academy." Through the liberality of the citizens of Middletown, two substantial stone buildings had been erected for the school; and it was for a short time very prosperous, drawing cadets from almost every state in the Union. Its prosperity, however, soon waned; and, failing to obtain a charter from the Legislature, it was removed, early in 1829, to Norwich, Vt., leaving vacant the buildings it had occupied. The Rev. Laban Clark, D.D., then Presiding Elder of the New Haven District, happened shortly after to be in Middletown; and being informed that one of the trustees of these buildings had casually suggested selling them to the Methodists, for the sum of five thousand dollars, he at once notified them that he would be one of ten to purchase the property, and would promptly secure the other nine. This led to the serious consideration of the matter; and at the ensuing session of the New York Conference, May, 1829, Dr. Clark presented from the trustees proposals for the transfer of the property in due form, and urged their acceptance upon the conference. A committee, consisting of James Emory, Samuel Lucky, and Heman Bangs, was appointed to consider these proposals. The New England Conference, being invited to unite in the project, appointed Timothy Merritt, S. Martindale, and Willbur Fisk to act in conjunction with the New York Committee.

The first act of this joint committee was to issue proposals inviting the several towns within a specified region to compete for the location of the college by the offer of subscriptions. Liberal offers came from Troy, N. Y., Bridgeport, Conn., and Wilbraham, Mass.; but those from Middletown were now so modified that the committee had no hesitation in preferring them. The trustees of the Academy, with the consent of the stockholders, offered the entire property, valued at about thirty thousand dollars, to the conferences, on the two conditions, that it should be perpetually used for a college or university, and that a fund of forty thousand dollars should first be raised for the endowment of the college. About eighteen thousand dollars of this fund were promptly subscribed by citizens of Middletown. The report of the committee recommending the acceptance of this offer was adopted at the session of conference in May, 1830. The forty thousand dollars was soon raised, trustees were at once chosen, and the college organized under the name, "The Wesleyan University."

At the first meeting of the joint Board of Trustees and Visitors, August 24, 1830, the Rev. Willbur Fisk, D.D., then principal of Wesleyan Academy, was elected first President of the Wesleyan University. In October of the same year, a preparatory school was opened in the buildings, under the superintendence of the Rev. W. C. Larrabee. In May, 1831, a charter was granted the University; and on the twenty-first of the following September its halls were opened to students. The Faculty consisted of President Fisk, Professors Augustus W. Smith and John Mott Smith, and Tutor W. Magoun. At first, in accordance with the peculiar views of President Fisk, which were afterwards entertained by Presidents Wayland of Brown and Marsh of the University of Vermont, the proficiency of the student was made the only basis of classification; and any student able to pass the requisite examination received a diploma, without regard to the time he had spent in college. This plan, however, was soon abandoned, and the usual system of classification adopted in its stead. It is worthy of note, that the Wesleyan University anticipated another of the most important features of the new education, by establishing, very early in its history, a scientific course, to meet the wants of those who wished to obtain advanced literary and scientific training, but whose tastes or circumstances forbade the ordinary classical course. In its early days of poverty and of struggle, the institution had many faithful and earnest friends, among whom Dr. Laban Clark and Dr. Heman Bangs are worthy of especial mention; but to no one was it so deeply indebted as to its President, Willbur Fisk. His pure and lofty piety and his gentle and winning manner endeared him to all who knew him; while his tact and prudence, his high administrative ability, his thorough culture and extensive reputation, and his untiring efforts in behalf of the University, soon assured its success, and secured for it general recognition.

At the death of Dr. Fisk, in 1839, Dr. Stephen Olin, then in Europe, was elected President. On his return from Europe, the following year, Dr. Olin found himself too feeble to assume the duties of the presidency, and consequently resigned it early in 1841. In February of that year, Dr. Nathan Bangs was elected to the vacant post. Dr. Bangs, then in the midst of a long and honorable career, felt that the sphere of his greatest usefulness lay elsewhere: he accepted the position with reluctance, and in July, 1842, willingly resigned it to Dr. Olin, whose health had now so improved as to justify his acceptance.

Dr. Olin's fame as a pulpit orator, and his previous success in a similar situation, caused him to be greeted with an enthusiastic welcome. His health was so feeble as never to allow him to devote himself as he wished to the work of instruction. He was, however, very successful in improving the financial condition of the University, and extending its reputation; and his noble and commanding character was itself an inspiration to all the students under his charge. He received very efficient aid in the general administration of the University from Professor Augustus W. Smith, LL.D., who for several years filled the office of Vice President.

Dr. Olin died in 1851. After an interval of a year, Professor Smith was elected to the chair of President. Dr. Smith had been connected with the University from the beginning; he was a most thorough scholar, and extended, while President, the high and well-deserved reputation he had won as a professor of mathematics. It was the constant desire of President Smith, during the whole term of his administration, to secure such an endowment fund for the University as would relieve it from the constant pressure of financial embarrassment, and assure its continued existence and prosperity. About one hundred thousand dollars was subscribed to this fund; and although, as is usual in such cases, the full amount subscribed was never realized, yet by the persevering labors of President Smith, ably aided by Professor H. B. Lane, more than eighty thousand dollars was at this time invested for the endowment of professorships. Mr. Isaac Rich, of Boston, was the chief donor to this fund.

Upon the resignation of President Smith, in 1857, the Rev. Joseph Cummings, D.D., LL.D., President of Genesee College, was elected to the vacant post, although he did not assume office until the spring of 1858. The personal force and energy of President Cummings, his tireless industry, his hearty devotion to the welfare of the University, together with his skill and popularity as an instructor, combined to make his administration in many respects a very successful one. It was particularly marked by the growth of the material interests of the institution, in which President Cummings always took especial concern. To his labors the University is principally indebted for the line of noble buildings that now crown the hill.

During the Commencement week of 1868, a new and tasteful library building, capable of containing ninety thousand volumes, was dedicated. This building was erected by the late Mr. Isaac Rich, at a cost of forty thousand dollars. During the same week, the contributions of Mr. Rich to the Endowment Fund were increased to one hundred thousand dollars. In the fall of 1868, the old "Boarding Hall" was remodeled and transformed into "Observatory Hall," by the addition of a handsome tower, in which was placed one of Alvan Clark's finest refracting telescopes. The Commencement season of 1871 was rendered memorable by the dedication of two new and beautiful buildings. The one, the Memorial Chapel, was erected at a cost of about sixty thousand dollars, in memory of those alumni and students who fell in the war for the Union. The funds for the erection of this chapel were mostly raised by general subscription during the centenary year, 1866. The other building was the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, erected during the years 1869-71, at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars. For this building the University is indebted to the munificence of Orange Judd, Esq., of New York, N. Y., who will ever be remembered as one of the most faithful and generous friends of his Alma Mater.

It was during this period also that provision was made for the regular increase of the library and the scientific collections of the University. During the years 1864-65, a library fund amounting to twenty-seven thousand six hundred dollars was raised by the alumni. This fund, although originally none too large, and afterwards somewhat depleted by unfortunate investments, secured for the library a continuous, if not a very rapid, growth. The completion of the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, in 1872, provided ample accommodations for the proper care and arrangement of the scientific collections of the University; and in the years immediately following, large additions were made to these collections, chiefly by the endeavors of Mr. G. Brown Goode, then Curator of the Museum. Since that time the growth of the Museum has been constant and rapid. In 1872 the college curriculum was enlarged, especially in the department of natural science, and modified by the extension of the elective system; and in the fall of that year the halls of the University were, for the first time, opened to women.

President Cummings resigned his position in June, 1875, though he continued in charge of the department of philosophy until January, 1878. At a special meeting, held July 28, 1875, the Trustees elected as the successor of President Cummings, the Rev. Cyrus D. Foss, D.D. President Foss entered upon the duties of his office at the opening of the fall term, and was formally inaugurated October 26, 1875. He found it necessary to give immediate attention to the enlargement of the permanent funds of the University. The growth of the endowment during the previous ten years had by no means kept pace with the growth of the unproductive wealth of the University in buildings, collections, and other material facilities. The increase in the number of buildings and the needful enlargements of the course of study rendered the annual expenditures, of necessity, greater than ever; while, on the other hand, in the stagnation of business and general financial depression that followed the panic of 1873, the productive property of the University had depreciated greatly in value. In March, 1876, a committee of the Trustees decided that only about one-half of the bills receivable reported at the previous Commencement could be any longer considered good. A debt, allowed gradually to increase for twenty years, had reached the sum of sixty thousand dollars; while the total amount of funds from which income was available was only one hundred and forty-one thousand dollars. The annual expenditure was about forty-six thousand dollars; the annual income from all sources only twenty thousand. In these circumstances, it was evident—to quote the words of President Foss in his report to the conference in 1876—that “only large and generous help, promptly given to the institution, could save it from disaster.” Never, perhaps, was the University in a more critical position. It is gratifying to be able to record that the generosity of its friends soon removed it out of urgent danger. A committee appointed by the Alumni Association appealed for aid to all the graduates of the college. In response to this appeal about forty thousand dollars was subscribed, of which the greater part was paid. Still more largely liberal was the response to the untiring energy of President Foss. The inevitable annual deficit, while it yet continued, was met by generous annual subscriptions, in advance, chiefly from the Trustees. The debt of the University was paid. Largely by his efforts, the “Centennial Fund,” started in 1876, was carried to about four hundred thousand dollars, some of which was not paid in until after his retirement from the presidency. During the five years of his administration, nearly two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was added to the permanent productive funds. If the needs of the University were still great, the danger of immediate disaster was past. Of the group of generous friends whose liberality brought this timely aid, the largest giver was Hon. George I. Seney, who began then the series of his princely gifts.

But it was not financial success alone that marked the administration of President Foss. A character so noble, a kindness and courtesy so unvarying, an enthusiasm for goodness so inspiring, a piety so high and pure—these could not fail of their effect upon all who knew him. His influence was itself an education of the best sort. No president of Wesleyan University was ever more respected; none was ever better beloved.

In May of 1880, President Foss was called by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to fill the highest office in the gift of the Church. At the annual meeting of the Trustees in June following, the place thus made vacant was filled by the election of the Rev. John W. Beach, D.D. President Beach brought to his position a sound, conservative scholarship, combined with energy and caution in the management of practical affairs and a remarkable mastery of administrative details. The opening years of his administration promised a large increase in the resources of the University, but adverse circumstances prevented the complete fulfillment of that promise. A period of general financial stringency came on. There was a shrinkage in rates of interest, and Mr. Seney, the most liberal benefactor of the University thus far, who had already given over one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, found it impossible to pay the large additional sum which he had promised in the first year of President Beach's administration. For some years, therefore, the University grew but slowly, yet it continued to grow. No additional debts were incurred, the number of the Faculty was not lessened, while the number of students steadily, though slowly, increased.

President Beach retired from office in 1887, and Senior Professor John M. Van Vleck, to whose wise counsels Wesleyan University has owed so much ever since its early days, served as Acting President for two years. In November, 1888, the Rev. Bradford Paul Raymond was elected President, but did not assume the duties of his office until the beginning of the next college year, in September, 1889. At the time of his election, President Raymond was at the head of Lawrence University, in Appleton, Wis. He had enjoyed a thorough educational training, and brought to his new office enthusiasm, vigor, and liberal notions of educational policy. He held the chair of President until 1908, a longer period than that of any preceding President.

Those nineteen years were marked by great advancement in almost every department of the college life. In December, 1889, Dr. Daniel Ayres gave to the University securities to the value of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, "for scientific purposes." In the next year, 1890, by the will of D. B. Fayerweather, Wesleyan received a bequest of one hundred thousand dollars and a share in the residue of the estate. There was considerable litigation attending the settlement of the estate, but the University has received in all from that source, up to this time, the sum of nearly two hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars. Twenty-five thousand dollars of the Fayerweather bequest was added to an amount already raised by subscription for a new college gymnasium; and this building, the Fayerweather Gymnasium, was formally dedicated in October, 1895. With this exception, all of these two large bequests was devoted to the increase of the permanent Endowment Fund. Other gifts from time to time increased this permanent Endowment Fund before the close of the term of President Raymond to the sum of one million, five hundred and six thousand, nine hundred and nine dollars.

The real property of the University also largely increased during President Raymond's term. In the summer of 1893 the interior of old North College was entirely renovated by Mr. John E. Andrus at an expense of about twenty-six thousand five hundred dollars. In 1903-04 a new physical laboratory was erected by the liberality of Mr. Charles Scott and Mr. Charles Scott, Jr., of Philadelphia, to be called the John Bell Scott Laboratory of Physics, in memory of John Bell Scott of the class of 1881, who died while serving as naval chaplain during the Spanish war of 1898. This elegant and well-appointed building cost about one hundred and seventeen thousand dollars. During the same years the Willbur Fisk Hall on High Street was erected at a cost of about one hundred and eighteen thousand dollars, and was paid for mostly by individual gifts in the "Twentieth Century Thank Offering Movement."

On the morning of March 1, 1906, the old North College burned to the ground. The new structure, which takes its place and occupies the same site, was opened in the fall of 1907. It cost about one hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars.

The Alumni Library Fund, which had originally amounted to twenty-seven thousand, six hundred dollars, had been reduced by unfortunate investments to about eighteen thousand dollars, a sum altogether inadequate to the needs of the library. In the Commencement season of 1895, a movement was started to increase this fund by a general subscription among the alumni, and Mr. John E. Andrus generously offered to give one-fourth of any amount that should be thus raised. The sum raised in this way amounted to sixteen thousand, eight hundred and fifty-seven dollars. Then, in the fall of 1898, the library received the sum of thirty thousand dollars and a choice collection of six thousand volumes by the will of the Rev. Albert S. Hunt, D.D., of the class of 1851. Three years later the Library Fund received a further addition of twenty thousand dollars from a bequest of Mrs. Stephen Wilcox, of Brooklyn. The Library Fund at present amounts to eighty-nine thousand, two hundred and sixty-four dollars.

The total property of the University increased in these ways amounted, at the close of the administration of President Raymond, to two million, five hundred and eighty-nine thousand, nine hundred and twenty-three dollars, having more than doubled since he took office.

The question of co-education was matter of earnest discussion during the whole term of President Raymond. So long as there were comparatively few women in college their presence excited little opposition, but after 1890 their number rapidly increased. In March, 1899, the Trustees authorized the appointment of a joint committee of Trustees, Faculty, and alumni consider the whole question of co-education in Wesleyan University. The deliberations of this committee lasted something over a year, and they were not able then to agree upon a unanimous report. But as the result of their deliberations, in June of 1900 the Trustees voted that the number of women to be admitted to college in future should be limited to twenty per cent. of the total number of students in the preceding year. This action, however, like all measures of compromise, was not really satisfactory to anybody, and the opposition to co-education, although less bitter and pronounced, continued, until finally, in February, 1909, the Trustees voted, that no women should be admitted to any class later than that entering in 1909. In point of fact, no women presented themselves for admission after the passage of that vote, and with the graduation of the class of 1912 it is probable that the presence of women undergraduates will cease. The Trustees in a later resolution made it clear that women may be admitted as graduate students.

The large addition to the resources of the University during President Raymond's administration allowed an expansion of the course of study and an increase in the number of the Faculty. When he took office the Faculty numbered twenty. When he resigned it numbered thirty-seven. Appropriations were made by the State and the National Government for the prosecution of scientific research in the laboratories of the University, and it was in this period that the important investigations of Professors Atwater, Rosa, Benedict, and Conn did much to extend the reputation of the University.

But large as was the increase in the resources of the University, its expenditures more than kept pace with its income, until during the last few years of President Raymond's term there was a considerable annual deficit. The increasing cares and responsibilities of his office told heavily upon the health of President Raymond, and he was obliged in the summer of 1907 to tender his resignation, to take effect in 1908. He accepted the position of Professor of the English Bible, but his continued ill health rendered it impossible for him to perform the duties of that office and, in 1909, he was retired as Professor Emeritus. He is still living in Middletown, and his genial, sympathetic nature have won for him the lasting respect and love of a host of friends.

On the resignation of President Raymond, Professor William North Rice, who, since the retirement of Professor Van Vleck in 1904, has been the Senior Professor in acting service, was made Acting President and filled that office for an interregnum of two years. On November 13, 1908, the Trustees elected to the presidency William Arnold Shanklin, D.D., LL.D., then President of Upper Iowa University. President Shanklin assumed the duties of his office immediately after Commencement, 1909, and was formally inaugurated on November 12, 1909. He devoted his first year to familiarizing himself with the details of administration and forming acquaintance with the student body, and with the patrons and friends of the University. The present year, 1910-11, he is engaged in an effort to secure an addition of a million dollars to the resources of the University. His remarkable energy and the charm of his personality have evoked most general and hearty enthusiasm, stimulated everywhere the interest and loyalty of the alumni and friends of the University, and leave no doubt as to the success of his administration.

June 28. Commencement.

July. College regatta at Saratoga; Wesleyan badly defeated; last appearance in intercollegiate rowing.

Summer. Present reading-room on the second floor of the library fitted up; magazines removed from North College reading-room.—Publication of the third edition of THE ALUMNI RECORD.

1883-84.

Sept. 13. Fall term began.—Sunday service in the chapel discontinued; students required to attend church in town.—Revised regulations issued by the Faculty; demerits abolished.

Nov. 19. Wesleyan defeated the University of Michigan at football, 14-6; record for the season: Wesleyan 90, opponents 78.

1884, Spring. Running track built around the football field.—Chief athletic interest of the year in football and tennis.—No crew sent to Saratoga on account of lack of funds.—Efforts to raise money from the alumni for repairing the boathouse.

June 10. Faculty voted to make constitution, psychology, and surveying the only required subjects for junior year, Latin-scientific course, with three others to be chosen from a list of eight.—28. Trustees reduced salaries ten per cent. for next year and requested President Beach to give his time entirely or mainly to raising the permanent endowment to one million dollars.—Payment of Seney Scholarships for this year and the next assumed by the Trustees.—26. Commencement.

Aug. 11. Death of Mrs. Ruth Fisk, widow of President Fisk.

Sept. 11. Fall term began.—Campus enlarged by the removal of the Fisk House from the southeast corner.

Nov. College colors changed from lavender to red and black.—Rev. William Griffin gave $25,000 to the endowment fund.—Wesleyan defeated Harvard at football, 16-0.—The catalogue appeared in a new form, with full description of courses.

Dec. Philadelphia Wesleyan Club organized.

1885, Feb. 7. Wesleyan admitted to the Intercollegiate Football Association (with Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and the University of Pennsylvania).

March 24. The Faculty voted to require a knowledge of French or German for admission to the Latin-scientific and scientific courses. (See Catalogue, 1886-87.)

May. The old orchard in the rear of Observatory Hall removed.—25. Y. M. C. A. organized.

June 23. The Foss Professorship of Physics established.—Professor Van Benschoten reported a gift from Mr. John N. Camp of $800 for the purchase of Greek coins.—The Trustees voted to discontinue the Seney scholarships after June, 1886.—The alumni voted to abolish the annual supper after this year.—25. Commencement, held in the North Congregational Church, the Methodist Church, the scene of commencements since 1838, having been burned.

1885-86.

Sept. 10. Fall term began.

Nov. 7. Wesleyan defeated the University of Pennsylvania at football, 25-18.

1886, Feb. The Baseball Association organized.

June 24. Commencement. Class day exercises omitted, on account of dissensions in the class.

Sept. 16. Fall term began.—Course of study changed: freshman Latin, Greek and mathematics reduced from five to four hours a week, and an elective in French or German added; chemistry introduced as a sophomore requirement for classical students; astronomy changed from a senior to a junior requirement for scientific students; surveying made elective.—Seney scholarships restored.

Nov. 12. Present college cheer first used.

1887, May 16. First annual Field Day of Athletic Association.

June 29. The Trustees declared the office of President vacant; Professor Van Vleck appointed Acting President.—30. Commencement.

During this year nine hundred volumes were presented to the college from the library of the late Rev. D. D. Whedon.
